The Objective of the Conference

The most pivotal issues of the next few decades will surely focus on sustainability. However, it is not a reform of our current operation: it is rather an operational paradigm shift. As David Harvey makes it clear: “Our current operation considers profits as privatized while losses are continuously socialized”. With a three-decade history, the 16th conference aims at concentrating on this issue: in addition to the problems and challenges, we will try to find possible solutions to these topics. At the same time the Károly Róbert Campus of the Eszterházy Károly University will aim at keeping its roots as the agri-food and regional development knowledge centre of the North-Hungarian region. To be able to fulfil this role in the long run, we would like to invite national and international experts whose help is crucial to expand our knowledge base. Our conference serves as a forum where participants can present their findings and discuss numerous problems and topics. We are looking forward to welcoming our guests from economic, governmental and civil organizations not to speak about participants from the RDI field.
